

THIS WEEK IN Palestine

Issue No. 173, September 2012

Latest update 9 2014f August 2014, at 4.39 am

Today's Events

Wed. April 11, 2018

Latest Issue

Home

Articles

In The Limelight

Events

Directory

Tourism

Statistics

Cyber Palestine

Artist of the Month

Shadi Al Zaqzouq

Born in Benghazi in 1981, Shadi Al Zaqzouq has had an unusual route, deprived from a passport and a homeland. He grew up among the Palestinian community in Libya and was expelled with his family and other Palestinian refugees right after the Oslo Accords were signed. The young man was 15 when he and his family had to flee the desert where he grew up. But, the environment in which Shadi had spent his childhood and teenage years would leave major traces on his work to come.

Visitor: Oil on canvas, 65 Cm, 2012

The double frustration of isolation, both due to the hostility of the local population towards the foreigners who were benefiting from their special status and to the geographic separation created by the desert, created an artist obsessed with the desire for freedom and encounter with the other.

Al Mutashael: Oil on canvas, 65 Cm, 201

Right before the second Intifada was sparked at the end of the nineties, Shadi and his family returned to Gaza, which proved to be another experience of confinement. After the borders were closed, this new situation, an echo of the first one, increased the artist's desire to escape. In 1999, he passed his baccalaureate and decided to take up musical studies, selecting the guitar as his instrument. A young graduate in classical music, Shadi became a music teacher. But, he was also a painter, and he never stopped. He found his inspiration in the streets, which he mostly roamed at night.

After washing: Oil on canvas, 65 Cm, 2011

Surrounded by numerous friends, mainly musicians, he joined the group Windows from Gaza in 2002, and became a regular visitor to the French Cultural Centre, the one and only foreign cultural centre in the Gaza Strip. It is there that he showed his paintings for the first time, with his project Gaza Upside Down, which then toured Palestine. In 2006, he won the Young Palestinian Artist Award from the A.M. Qattan Foundation, followed by a six-month residency at the International City of Arts in Paris from the French Consulate in Jerusalem. His first paintings were very figurative and expressive. He also used the genre of caricature in an attempt to develop an art vibrant with comic energy. In 2010, he worked on the performance of a third Intifada.

Search

Categories

Archive

See This Week in Palestine's Previous Edition

Month
 Year

Edition No.

PDF Version

Download This Week in Palestine's Print Edition

Subscription

Subscribe NOW to the Print Edition

Classified Ads

*Use it gently: Pencil on paper,
32 x 50 cm, 2011*

Shadi's creation then met the Arab revolutions. The religious scarecrow of Islam waved by the political class and the media, the energy of youth, and the modernity of the fight soon became the material of his new production. The work, titled generically, USE IT GENTLY, has a decidedly humorous touch. His work has been shown in France and finally reached Dubai. Recently, in spring 2012, he showed one of his paintings, which was framed with a bicycle tire and displayed a woman with a bandana on her face, uncovered hair, and sharp gaze, holding bomb-painted pants in her hands and a sign written in Arabic with the motto that chased the dictators away in 2011, "Get off." The work was censored by the Dubai Art Fair and taken down without debate. His other paintings remained in the show.

Shadi's work can now be seen as steadily moving towards more collective themes in reaction to his family status as a young father, the living conditions of a stateless people, the yearnings of a hopeful Arab youth, and the international creations spanning from the Occident to Asia, as the promise of encounters goes beyond confining identities. His creation widens as he collaborates with other artists.

Courtesy of Monsallier - Talmart Gallery – Paris.

See PDF www.thisweekinpalestine.com/i173/pdfs/article/aotm.pdf

Contact Us | About Us | Site Map | Career

© 2018 Turbo Computers & Software Co.Ltd - Turbo Design All rights reserved

Like 33K

Disclaimer | Legal Notes