Introduction

Each annual report is a retrospective analysis of the previous 12 months. It is inevitably something of an artificial exercise since the calendar and budget years do not coincide with the academic year and especially because change, evolution and transformation do not occur according to annual rhythms. However, this examination of the past has the great virtue of not being restricted to ex-post information for shareholders and stakeholders. It compels the institution concerned to pause for a moment in the daily race towards the future and to think about its achievements and shortcomings, the challenges it has faced and what it can learn from them. It also provokes reflection about how reforms come about, develop, fail or succeed, and also about the interaction between internal factors and the external environment.

The central issue for the Institute at this stage of its development is not to set strategic objectives, which are now clearly defined both by the Convention that established it and by the High Council's policies: the three main pillars are the doctoral programme, the post-doctoral programme and research at the highest international level. The strategies for achieving these objectives may be the subject of debate and adjustment but that is the Institute's 'core business'. All efforts must be directed at improving our performance in these areas. This quest for progress does not generally take the form of spectacular or radical measures but rather a constant daily effort to do better. The satisfaction of making progress in a particular field must be immediately tempered by the awareness that efforts must be unceasing and that progress is neither linear nor constant. There is always room to do better and this applies to everyone: researchers, professors and administration alike. The following developments are a simple illustration of this general philosophy.

Academic Staff

As usual, several professorships were created or filled during 2007. In particular, and for the first time, the Chair in Transatlantic Relations created with the support of the Irish Government has been filled. The new professor, Kiran Patel (Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin) took up his post in September, as did Professors Philipp Ther (Universität Viadrina Frankfurt—Oder) and Sebastian Conrad (Freie Universität Berlin). The Department of History and Civilization was significantly reinforced with the arrival of these three professors.

The Economics Department welcomed Professor Fernando Vega-Redondo (replacing Professor Karl Schlag) while in the Law Department Professor Hans-Wolfgang Micklitz took over the Chair of Professor Christian Joerges, whose departure saw one of the most senior professors leave the Institute (his first appointment dates back to September 1987).

Other professors also left us while retaining part-time functions. Jacques Ziller (Law Department) took up his post at the Università di Pavia, while Massimo Motta joined the Università di Bologna, Anindya Banerjee the University of Birmingham and Rick Van Der Ploeg the University of Oxford.

Overall, despite the structural turnover characteristic of the Institute, each department continued to function smoothly, with satisfactory staffing levels.

At the end of 2007, the Economics Department had 12 professors, the Law Department 13, the Department of History and Civilization 11 and the Political and Social Sciences Department 15. Seven of these professors were also 'joint chairs' with the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies.

The challenge for each of the departments and the RSCAS is to reconcile the need for stability in the main disciplines and subjects with the inevitable and welcome change that comes with the new recruits. In conclusion, it is interesting to note that although competition for vacant posts remains lively, there is still a difference in the number of applications between female and male candidates. We are a long way from achieving an equal gender balance among professors, although this balance is almost perfect among researchers and post-docs. The revolution may be coming but is taking time to arrive.

Researchers

In 2007 the Institute received a total of 1,063 applications. After a selection based on their files and interviews, 130 researchers were accepted, spread across the four Departments: 34 in Law (of which 7 students for the LL.M.), 25 in Economics, 33 in Department of History and Civilization and 38 in Political and Social Sciences.

Recruitment of researchers is a complex task since the available grants are allocated according to a system of national quotas. With annual variations, there is not a perfect match in supply and demand for any particular country: there may be not enough or too many grants and it is impossible to use mechanisms for compensation between countries as the Institute has no control over the number or amount of grants. Furthermore, the Institute lacks resources to face the growing demand from countries which are not EUI members (countries neighbouring on the EU and others). In order to alleviate the adverse effects of this situation, the Institute has succeeded in introducing a few adjustments, but they are still inadequate and only a partial solution:

- Thanks to Italy, grants have been offered for some years now to countries under the 'neighbourhood policy'. Late in 2007, the Italian Government agreed to make an additional financial effort to bring the grants up to the minimum level regarded as necessary in relation to the cost of living in Florence.

- Spain has agreed to double the number of grants offered to candidates from Latin America, while Luxembourg has offered an additional 2 grants to non-EU candidates.

- Finally, the High Council has agreed to create four non-national grants to be awarded to candidates from non-EU countries. This initiative was approved by the strategy group set up by the High Council, which suggested expanding the group of non-national grants to 30% of the total. Although it did not express an opinion on this specific target, the High Council has given its approval to this major policy change.

The recruitment policy for post-doctoral programmes has been an unqualified success. In 2007 nearly 1,000 applicants from 96 countries applied for Max Weber Programme or Jean Monnet Fellowships.

In addition to the grants of these main programmes are those of the Stint Foundation (which unfortunately comes to an end in 2008), the Gulbenkian Foundation, the Polish Academy of Science and the Finnish Academy of Science. Since 2007, the Robert Schuman Centre has also benefited from a grant from the Karamanlis Foundation for Democracy. In 2007, the Institute also obtained 7 Marie Curie grants (to which a further 2, currently on the reserve list, may be added).

The success of these post-doctoral programmes bears witness to considerable expectations and needs. The objective of the Institute should be not only their consolidation, but also their development and expansion.

Distinctions and Prizes

During 2007, several members of the Institute received prizes or distinctions.

Eva Storskrubb received the Mauro Cappelletti Prize for the best thesis in comparative law.

Rainer Bauboeck was awarded the Latsis Prize by the European Science Foundation.

Steven Poelhekke won the Graduate Student Paper Competition Prize by the North American Regional Science Council, for his paper 'Do Amenities and Diversity Encourage City Growth? A Link through Skilled Labor'.

On 30 May 2007 Florin Bilbiie, former researcher in the Economics Department was awarded the Rotary Prize Premio Europa given by the Firenze Nord Rotary Club and its French and Spanish partners for the best PhD thesis defended between 2004-2007 at the EUI: Eclectic Essays in Fiscal and Monetary Policy (supervisor: G Corsetti).

Stefano Bartolini received an Honourable Mention by the Book Prize Committee of the EU Studies Association (EUSA) for his book Restructuring Europe, OUP, 2005.

Philippe Schmitter received the ECPR Lifetime Achievement Award for Outstanding Contribution to European Political Science at the ECPR meeting in Pisa in September 2007. Nikoleta Yordanova, SPS researcher, won the Duncan Black Award given for the best paper presented by a graduate student at the ECPR Conference in Pisa.

Valentina Falco, Law researcher, was awarded the biannual Premio Giuseppe Barile e Pietro Verri for her undergraduate degree Recent Developments of the Role of Customary Law in International Humanitarian Law defended at the Facoltà di Giurisprudenza dell'Università degli Studi di Milano.

Charles-Henri Massa, law researcher, won the International Trademark Association ADR Online Competition for best mediator and Second Place Advocate (June 2007).

Fabrizio Cafaggi was elected to the American Law Institute (ALI).

On 7 December Yves Mény was awarded an honorary degree from Panteion University Athens, for his contribution to Political Science, and in Particular European Politics.

The EUI was nominated for, and reached the final phase of, the 2007 competition for the Prestigious Spanish Principe de Asturias Award in the International Cooperation category.

Research

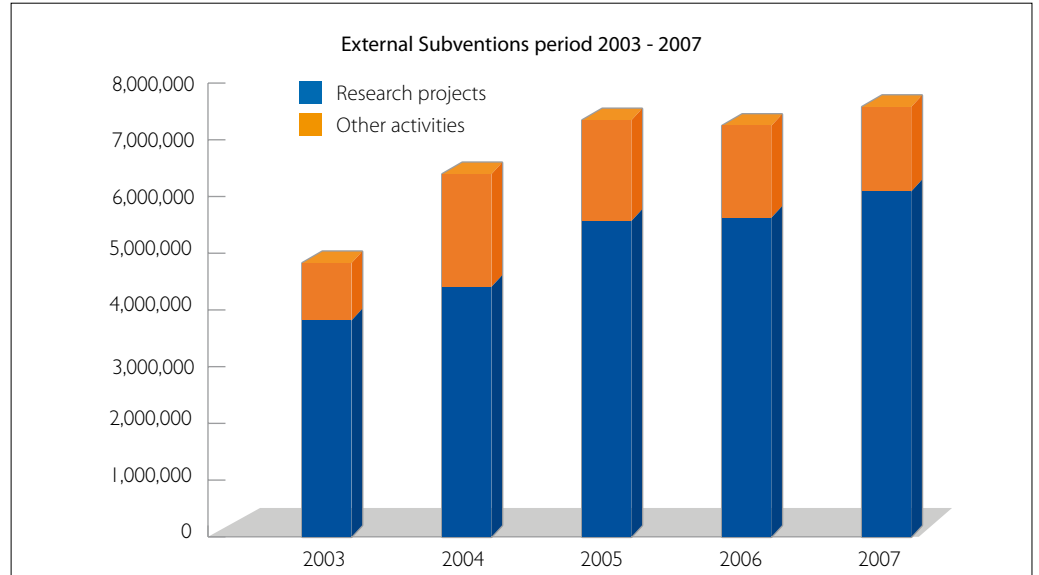

Research at the Institute in recent years has been particularly active as can be seen from the 'Publications' volume, which catalogues all research published from January 2006 until October 2007 at or under the auspices of the Institute. This 306-page volume provides a fairly exhaustive picture of research activities at the EUI. In particular, it bears witness to the growing number of theses defended: 125 in 2007. The completion rate is 88%, a figure unparalleled in other top European and American universities. This excellent percentage could be misleading unless it is supported by the ability of our former researchers and fellows to find employment after leaving the Institute.

Given the variety of research projects and programmes, only the main projects in progress or those being launched will be mentioned here—mainly those financed by the European Union (7th Framework Programme).

- F. Francioni: Regulating Privatisation of War: the Role of the EU in Assuring the Compliance with International Humanitarian Law and Human Rights
- A. Trechsel: Enabling citizens’ initiative to eParticipation
- M. Franklin and S. Bartolini: Providing an Infrastructure for Research on Electoral Democracy in the EU

The Robert Schuman Centre, together with Professor Trechsel, launched EUDO (European Union Democracy Observatory)—a joint research and study initiative on democracy.

Marco Del Panta, EUI Secretary General

In addition to these main projects, 2007 saw the launch of a programme on energy named after Ms Loyola De Palacio, who died prematurely in December 2006. A member of the European Commission, she had a lasting impact on transport and energy policy.

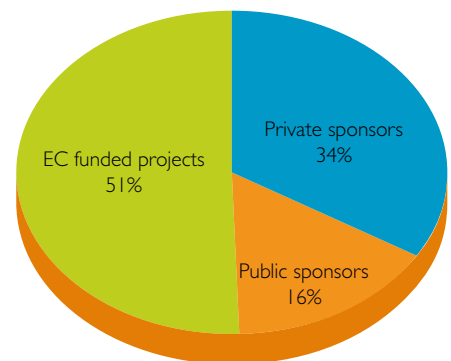

This programme will be financed mainly by external funding. Its goal is to tackle major issues such as the strategic and geopolitical problems of supply, the regulation of the sector, environmental impact, and other related issues.

Administration and Infrastructure

In March, Marco Del Panta took up his position as Secretary General, an event of obvious administrative significance. The post had been vacant for over a year and his arrival filled a considerable vacuum at the head of the Institute’s administration.

Among the main initiatives of 2007 were the reorganisation of the ‘Welcome Unit’, the setting-up of an alumni/career-development structure, the administrative reorganisation of the Robert Schuman Centre and the enlargement of the 'communication' team.

Thanks to Giorgio Brundo and to the generosity of the Italian Government, the Institute's infrastructure was further improved. The first floor of the Library has been reorganised while new storage facilities (some 200,000 additional volumes) have been made available following the fitting-out of the upper cloister and especially the renovation of a former orangery in Villa La Fonte. A new conference hall (Sala Capitolare) was completed and opened. The restoration work on Villa Salviati (the future site of the Historical Archives) continues—albeit slowly—and we hope that the first phase of the work will be completed by the end of 2009. The premises formerly occupied by the Computing Service were allocated to the Law and History Department of Law and History and Civilization. The Computing Service moved to the recently rented Villa Raimondi. Some twenty additional workstations are now available for researchers.

Visits

During 2007, the European University Institute again welcomed a number of high-profile visitors. On 22 March, a meeting was held at the EUI celebrating the 50 years of the Rome Treaties attended by Hans-Gerhard Pötering, President of the European Parliament, and the Presidents of EU Parliaments.

The President of the Republic of Latvia, Vaira Vīķe-Freiberga, visited the Institute on 29 March and delivered a speech entitled 'The EU and its Neighbours'.

Peter Frankenberg, Minister in the Government of Baden-Württemberg, visited the Institute on 14 April.

On 11 May 2007 Federal Councillor Pascal Couchepin was the guest for a debate on the future of Europe. On 17 May there followed a visit by the Foreign Affairs Minister of the Kingdom of Belgium, Karel de Gucht, who gave a lecture on the subject: 'Europe: Time to Go Global'. The lecture was followed by the inauguration of a work by Paul Van Gysegem's Work 'Gilgamesh', a gift from the Belgian Government to the European University Institute.

At the Conferring Ceremony on 5 October, the speech was given by Jacek Saryusz Wolski, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the European Parliament and former Visiting Fellow of the EUI.

On 11 October, Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa, then Italian Minister of Finance, visited the Institute and gave a lecture 'The European Economic Policy: between Brussels and Nation-States'.

The 2007 cycle of visits was brought to a close on 17 October by the visit of Ségolène Royal, who delivered a speech on European issues. A discussion with researchers from the various departments followed.

Dean of Studies

The position of Dean of Studies was introduced at the EUI in 2003, and first held by Neil Walker. The current Dean of Studies is Bruno De Witte, professor in the Law Department.

Bruno de Witte, Dean of Studies

The general ambit of the Dean of Studies is very broad, involving all matters relating to the co-ordination of studies at the Institute level. As well as chairing various key committees, including the Admissions Committee and the Doctoral Programme Committee, the Dean has a number of more general responsibilities. He liaises with the Departments, and in particular the departmental Directors of Graduate Studies, to ensure the development and maintenance of best practice in supervision, and, more generally, to develop effective policies and practices on all matters of common academic interest (e.g. grant entitlement, missions and exchanges, promotion of inter-disciplinary seminars). He also serves as a reference point for researchers encountering difficulties related to the pursuit of their research and unable to resolve these difficulties through the normal departmental channels. In these various functions, he works closely with the Institute's academic service, headed by Andreas Frijdal.

In the last five years, a number of initiatives have been taken in order to make the doctoral programme more effective. Whereas the completion rate of doctorates at the EUI is very high compared to other universities, there was room for improvement both in terms of the supervisor/supervisee relationship and in terms of the speed with which doctorates were completed. With regard to the first issue, the Institute introduced a Code of Practice for Doctoral Supervision at the EUI. It also introduced a questionnaire on supervision, to complement those on teaching. This questionnaire shows that researchers at the EUI seem, on the whole, happy about the quality of the doctoral supervision offered to them. The latest (anonymous) supervision assessment held in May 2007 revealed that 82% of researchers are either satisfied or very satisfied with their supervisor, these approval rates being roughly similar in all four departments.

Concerning the time researchers need for completion, new commitments were made to ensure that researchers finish their PhDs within five years. Moreover, researchers who receive the newly created 4th year grant of the EUI (the great majority receive this grant) commit themselves to submitting a complete draft of the thesis by the end of the 4th year. Today, both researchers and their supervisors are aware of these reinforced time constraints. Whereas they have led, in a few cases, to doctorates being abandoned because the candidate was unable to meet the deadlines, these rules on the whole have had a positive impact in encouraging speedy completion of the doctorate and, therefore, the pursuit of professional career opportunities without delay.

Apart from these specific concerns about completion rates and supervision quality, the task of maintaining and improving the standard of our doctoral programme is an ongoing one. It takes place against the background of a changing educational environment in Europe. In some countries and in some disciplines, universities find it increasingly difficult to attract the brightest students to their doctoral programmes. More remunerative opportunities in the private and public spheres may seem more attractive to potential researchers than does the undertaking of a multi-annual doctoral studies programme. In addition, and partly in response to this phenomenon, many universities and networks of universities have recently developed more structured doctoral programmes, and some countries (mainly in the north of Europe) now offer more attractive salaries and work conditions for doctoral candidates. The EUI must remain alert to these developments which lead to increased competition for the recruitment of the best doctoral students. This implies a constant readiness to take new initiatives that will keep us at the forefront of postgraduate education and research in the social sciences and humanities in Europe.

Department of History and Civilization

Profile

The Department of History and Civilization (HEC) focuses on the history of Europe from the Middle Ages to the present day. Within the department, European history is studied from a rich variety of perspectives, employing a wide range of research methodologies. Much of its research is characterised by a close engagement with the social sciences, while comparative history and transnational history are intensively discussed and developed. This diversity in analytical approaches in part reflects the professors' very different national and international backgrounds and specialisations. Notwithstanding this rich plurality of views, what distinguishes the department, the professors, fellows and researchers is their shared aim to surmount national perspectives on history, to place national historiographies in a distinct European perspective and to integrate them in a broader methodological and thematic context. Postgraduate students are encouraged to go beyond the local, regional and national historiography of their topics and to explore other historical realities and discourses, moving beyond familiar, thematic horizons.

The department focuses on two principal themes in its research and teaching. The first main theme is Empire, nation and regions. The re-examination of space as an analytical category of historical research has encouraged interest in a variety of European constellations, conflicts, and identities. The formation of Empires is at the heart of much faculty research (Curto, Yun Casalilla, Rees), opening up, amongst others, new perspectives for the study of recent and current developments. The development of the nation states and the regions in Europe are another axis of research, both in modern Europe (Molho, van Gelderen, Yun Casalilla, Calvi) and in contemporary Europe (Patel, Federico, Haupt, Rees). The relations between different spaces, the frontiers that separate and that align them, are analysed in the works of Federico and Curto. These relations are accompanied by conflicts. Wars and social eruptions are analysed by Molho, and also, from a colonial perspective, by Curto. The political violence which accompanies the establishment and destruction of Empires and nation states is treated by Rees and Haupt, whilst the conflictual relations between colonies and metropolises are of primary interest to Curto and Conrad. These historic spaces are also the place of formation of different identities and different ranks. The topic of transnational identities features in the research of Molho, Yun Casalilla, Curto, van Gelderen; nationalism is studied by Yun Casalilla and Haupt. Other fields of interest include the history of international relations (Patel), economic history (Federico), political and cultural history (Molho, Calvi, van Gelderen, Rees, Haupt and Ther), and colonial and transnational history (Curto, Molho, Yun Casalilla, Federico, Romano, Ther).

The study of ideas, discourses and memories is the other central focus of research. The department actively participates in recent historiographical and theoretical debates concerning the relationship of cultural history and social history, the status of narrative history, and the study of memory. Van Gelderen is developing a new intellectual history of early modern Europe; Rees and Strath do so for modern and contemporary Europe. The discourses, their force fields and effects are analysed for modern science by Romano, for gender by Calvi, for modernity by Strath. The study of memory in the twentieth century is central for the project on cultural heritage of Europe undertaken by Molho.

Class, Gender, Religion, Race. Alongside these themes, the department is a laboratory for innovative research and methodology. One of the riches of the department resides in the plurality of perspectives from which various periods and problems are studied: a number of social historians are interested in the study of social actors, practices, and constellations (Yun Casalilla, Molho, Curto, Federico, Haupt), and in relation to international developments (Prof. Conrad) and economic ones (Federico). The analysis of sexual roles and divisions focuses on the historical construction of experiences; on the practices of negotiation between juridical traditions and local cultures; on the transmission of values and the memory of families and individuals between generations (Calvi, Romano). Religion as a combination of theology, belief and ritual, and as a social and political factor is present in the work of van Gelderen, Molho, Haupt and Yun Casalilla. Ethnic divisions and groupings are studied by Curto, Rees and Ther.

The Doctorate in HEC. HEC offers a structured four-year doctoral programme. The first year comprises the study of historiographical issues and the in-depth exploration of selected central themes of European history. Professors direct more specialized research seminars, tailored to the needs of research students. The Department also provides training in research skills, a range of language courses, training in IC&T and multimedia skills. Funding is provided for doctoral candidates to undertake research missions, in order to work in archives and libraries. In the second, third and fourth years, students pursue their individual research, and are invited to present the results of their work in seminars and workshops. Doctoral students may also receive support to present their work-in-progress at international conferences.

Highlights of Academic Activities

The teaching activity of the Department consists of a number of Departmental Seminars and Research Seminars. The former present researchers with a broad view of major issues in each field of study, aimed specifically at developing critical awareness of theoretical, and methodological issues related to research. Seminars on writing European, comparative and trans-national are scheduled every year, as well as seminars on European historiographies, the discussions between history and social sciences (sociology and anthropology, cultural studies and economics). The Research Seminars, organised by individual professors or groups of professors, function as working seminars where researchers, professors and visiting scholars present their work in progress, with the aim of fostering cooperation and mutual dialogue between students and professors.

Professor Harold James organized the conference Faith and Economics on 19 March 2007, with the participation of Michel Camdessus (former Managing Director, IMF), Anwar Ibrahim (former Deputy Prime Minister and Finance Minister of Malaysia), Emma Rothschild (University of Cambridge, King's College) and Amartya Sen (Harvard University – Nobel Prize in Economics 1998)

Department of Economics

Profile

The Economics Department of the European University Institute brings together scholars from all over Europe in an outstanding research environment. The postgraduate programme including the research activities of faculty and researchers is the central activity of the Department. The primary objective of the Department of Economics is to provide doctoral teaching and supervision to our students at the highest international level. As in previous years, students and faculty in the Department have carried out intense research activities in macroeconomics, microeconomics and econometrics. The Department has continued the implementation of its new doctoral programme structure which started at the beginning of the academic year 2005-06.

The Economics Department provides its students with formal course-based training in the areas of economics and econometrics at the level needed for them to pursue successful academic or professional careers in leading universities or other research-oriented organizations. Study and research activities are structured as a four-year Ph.D. programme; 30 theses were defended in 2007. Most graduating students subsequently follow academic careers or work for international organizations, although some work in the private sector. Within the programme, students follow courses (in their first and second years), develop their own research with the guidance of a supervisor, and participate in other gener-

In a recent ranking of German economists working abroad, Helmut Lütkepohl was ranked No. 1 in the world. The ranking is based on publications in the top academic journals.

Congratulations to Leonid Hurwicz, Eric Maskin and Roger Myerson who have won the 2007 Sveriges Riksbank Prize in Economic Sciences in Memory of Alfred Nobel for their ground-breaking work on mechanism design. The Department is particularly delighted for Leonid Hurwicz who was PhD supervisor at the University of Minnesota for our colleague Fernando Vega-Redondo.

The first annual Carlo Alberto Medal, instituted by the Collegio Carlo Alberto of Torino, to be awarded to a young Italian economist under the age of 40 for his/her outstanding research contributions to the field of economics, was awarded to Nicola Persico, Professor of Economics and Professor of Law and Society at New York University, who was a part-time professor here in May 2006 and gave a course, together with Alessandro Lizzeri, on 'Topics in Industrial Organization'.

Department of Law

Profile

The Department of Law is committed to a balanced recruitment of professors, students and post-doctoral fellows covering the broadest possible range of national legal systems, European and international law, and sub-disciplines. The cultural and academic diversity of our doctoral programme, the LL.M., post-doctoral research and fellowship programmes is evidenced by the range of academic backgrounds represented by our departmental community: 14 professors, 139 researchers, 7 Fernand Braudel Senior Fellows, 1 Marie Curie Fellow, 1 Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation Fellow, 1 STINT Fellow, 15 Max Weber Fellows and 6 administrative staff, all from some 38 countries. Professor Ernst-Ulrich Petersmann continued as Head of Department.

The Department is European and international in its character, comparative in its approach and contextual in its methods. Its research priorities are organised around three main areas: the impact of constitutionalisation and enlargement on the law of the European Union; the impact of globalisation on international law and human rights; and the Europeanisation of private law. The teaching activities of the Department focus on seminars, advanced courses and doctoral workshops in international law, European law and comparative public and private law.

Departmental News and Honours

In September 2007, Professor Hans-W. Micklitz took over the Economic and Private Law Chair from Professor Christian Joerges, who returned to the University of Bremen.

In 2007, the Department hosted numerous eminent visiting scholars, including Professors Rudolph Bernhardt, Antonio Cassese, Luigi Condorelli, Lech Garlicki, Jack Greenberg, Anthony Kronman, Ernst-Joachim Mestmäcker, Allan Rosas, Martin Scheinin, Tullio Scovazzi, Bruno Simma and Gilles Trudeau.

Highlights of Academic Activities

In addition to the numerous seminars, conferences and research workshops organised by law professors, there are some 14 researcher-run Working Groups on diverse fields of European, international and comparative law, as well as the student-run Journal of European Legal Studies.

In July 2007, a group of EUI researchers from the SPS and Law departments organised a five day summer school on EU law and policy in Baku, Azerbaijan, with the collaboration and assistance of the Diplomatic Academy of Azerbaijan. The project was supervised by Prof. Marise Cremona (Law) and Dr. Thomas Grunert (European Parliament Fellow 2007).

The Academy of European Law

The main focus of the Academy of European Law is its summer courses, which take place at the EUI in June and July each year. The courses, on Human Rights Law and European Union Law, attract large numbers of candidates: 2007, over 400 applications were received and 80 students took part in each course. The Academy awarded 10 scholarships for each course to support the attendance of students from Eastern Europe and developing countries. This year the Human Rights Law course comprised a General Course by Judge Antônio Augusto Cançado Trindade on 'The Direct Access of Individuals to International Justice', a series of Specialized Courses on 'New Institutions for Human Rights Protection', and a Distinguished Lecture by the Secretary-General of Amnesty International, Ms Irene Zubaida Khan. For EU Law Course EUI Professor Neil Walker gave the General Course, 'The Past and Future of the European Constitution' and the Specialized Courses, 'Law and Environmental Governance in the EU'. The Distinguished Lecture for the EU Law course was given by Sir Francis Jacobs, Professor of Law at King's College, London and former Advocate-General at the European Court of Justice.

For the rest of the year, work at the Academy is concentrated on its publication programme and a number of special projects. The Collected Courses of the Academy of European Law, which are published as a series by Oxford University Press. Two edited volumes came out in 2007: Access to Justice as a Human Right, edited by Francesco Francioni, and The Fundamentals of EU Law Revisited: Assessing the Impact of the Constitutional Debate, edited by Catherine Barnard.

The European Journal of International Law (www.ejil.org), published five times a year by Oxford University Press, is another important part of the Academy's publications programme, with Anny Bremner acting as Managing Editor. Professor Francesco Francioni, Co-director of the Academy, joined the EJIL Editorial Board this year.

The European Society of International Law, whose secretariat is run by the Academy, held a Research Forum on 'The Power of International Law in Times of European Integration' in Budapest in September 2007. This was a particularly significant event for the Society as it sought to engage Central and Eastern European scholars. Papers delivered at the Forum may be found on the ESIL website (www.esil-sedi.org). The Society's third high-profile biennial conference, on 'International Law in a Heterogeneous World/Le droit international dans un monde hétérogène' will be held in Heidelberg in September 2008.

Within the framework of its special project on UN Reform, the Academy of European Law, together with the Istituto Affari Internazionali in Rome, and the Institute for Human Rights at Åbo Akademi, held a workshop on 'The New Human Rights Council: The First Two Years' in November 2007 in Florence. The aim of the workshop was to evaluate the potential of the newly established United Nations Human Rights Council in promoting universal respect for the protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms.

The Academy also supported a number of projects organized by members of the Law Department during 2007, including a workshop on the Armenian Genocide in May and a summer school held in Azerbaijan in July. Finally, an important commentary on the European Constitutional Treaty was published as a joint project of the Robert Schuman Centre and the Academy of European Law: G. Amato, H. Bribosia and B. de Witte (eds), Genesis and Destiny of the European Constitution.

The year closed for the Academy on an exciting note with news of its successful application for an FP7 grant from the European Commission. This three-year project, on the Privatization of War, will be directed by Professor Francioni in cooperation with other six EU universities.

Academic Directors: Professors Marise Cremona, Bruno de Witte and Francesco Francioni. Administration: Anny Bremner, Gillian Walker

Department of Political and Social Sciences

Profile

The Department of Political and Social Sciences specializes in comparative politics, comparative sociology, international relations and social and political theory and is one of the leading research departments in Europe. There is a common emphasis on social and political change within Europe at all levels, including national, subnational and transnational. Much of the research focuses on Europeanization understood in a very broad sense that includes, but is not confined to, the European Union, and that places a great deal of emphasis on cross-national comparisons.

The Department favours a multi-faceted approach to research projects and theses, many of which cut across the conventional disciplinary boundaries, and encourages pluralism in methodology and approaches. It hosts a number of large, collaborative projects financed by various sources, including the European Commission Framework programmes. It also supports many individual stand-alone projects and engages in various collaborative research activities with the Robert Schuman Centre. Members of the Department and the researchers have an active publication policy, resulting in many monographs, articles and edited books. In a forthcoming evaluation of the capacities of the discipline of Political Science in contemporary Europe (Klingemann, in West European Politics 31, 2008), data are cited showing the Department to be the highest performing Department in Europe. A detailed listing of the Department's publications can be found in Cadmus, with regular listing of abstracts in the SPS In Press Newsletter (www.eui.eu/SPS/Newsletter.shtml).

The Department currently has 15 full-time professors, whose interests range across a number of different themes in Political Science and Sociology, and more than 150 researchers. Members of the Department come from all over, and sometimes also beyond, Europe. The Department mentors some 12 postdoctoral Fellows in the Max

Weber Programme, and hosts a small group of Senior Fernand Braudel Fellows and other visiting Fellows. Including SPS-associated Fellows in the Robert Schuman Centre, this adds up to a total research community of some 200 persons, one of the largest of its kind in Europe. The research themes represented in this community often cut across disciplinary boundaries, enabling the Department to take advantage of varied approaches and methods. Among the key items in the current research programme are:

The shifting patterns of public authority in Europe that produce transformation of government. This field includes new modes of governance and institutional change at state and European level; European integration; transitions in government and markets and democratisation in both western and east-central Europe; urban and regional government; federalism; and the comparative study of political institutions, including executives and legislatures.

Social change in Europe and its implications for society, politics and public policy. One of the critical challenges is that of demographic change and societal aging, linked to the transformation of the family and life courses; another concerns patterns of social stratification and inequality as well as unemployment. Migration, its causes, patterns and implications has become a key issue for the future of Europe, with impacts on a number of other policy fields.

The comparative study of public policy at European, national and subnational and regional levels, a theme that covers social policy and welfare states; education policy; urban and regional policies; immigration policy; and defence and security policy.

Political and social structures and behaviour, reflecting a long-standing departmental interest in research on voting, elections, parties and party systems, as well as on social movements and new modes of political and social participation. There is also a strong interest in electronic democracy and the use of the internet as a form of political communication.

International relations and security, including theoretical issues in the study of international order; ethics of international relations; security policy, including the interconnections between internal and external security, and the new security agenda; and the emergence of Europe as an international actor.

Social and political theory, which is a theme that runs through many of the Department's research interests and includes moral and political philosophy, and global justice; theory of action and practical rationality; multiculturalism, implications of migration, combining normative theory with empirical research; democratic theory and practice, including participatory democracy, the evolution of public spheres, urban democracy and multinational democracy. The Department also has a strong interest in theories of new institutionalism and institutional change.

The Department's four-year doctoral programme puts a strong emphasis on the theoretical and methodological tools required for PhD research. In the first year there is a common core course on approaches and methods in the social sciences. Additional courses in both quantitative and qualitative methods are also available, as well as a new series of specialized courses in research design. A wide range of seminars and workshops is offered in substantial fields, many of them linked to the current research interests of the Department, while others are interdisciplinary and offered jointly with other departments at the EUI. Further intensive courses and workshops are offered as needed and funding is available for the summer schools run by the ECPR and other organizations. The Department also acts as the host for a number of international summer schools in the different research areas. Colloquia organized by professors with their supervisees provide spaces for discussion of research design and problems. A series of workshops and seminars on professional skills also help researchers to prepare for entry into the labour market.

Departmental News and Honours

Philippe C. Schmitter, professorial fellow of the department, received the highly prestigious ECPR Lifetime Achievement Award for Outstanding Contribution to European Political Science. The award was presented at the ECPR General Conference in September 2007 in Pisa, and was dedicated by Prof. Schmitter to the researchers of the SPS Department. The Award is in recognition of his pioneering theoretical contribution to the discipline. His achievements are widely acknowledged and have helped set new standards of excellence for political science in Europe and beyond.

Nikoleta Yordanova, PhD researcher, was the 2007 winner of the Duncan Black Award. This award honours a graduate student who has presented the best paper at the ECPR Conference pursuing research in analytical politics which combines systematic theoretical thinking and rigorous empirical testing.

Dorota Szelewa, PhD researcher, won the European Social Policy Analysis network/ Journal of European Social Policy Doctoral Researcher Prize for a paper co-authored with Michael Polakowski. The prize-winning paper will be published in the Journal of European Social Policy in the second issue of 2008.

Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies

Profile

The Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies is an interdisciplinary academic institution whose research focus is on Europe and the processes of European integration, broadly defined. The goal is to understand, in a comparative perspective, Europe's rich diversity in terms of history, law, economics, politics, society and culture, and how it fits into the broader international system or illustrates broader global processes. The research agenda is currently organised around the following core themes: Institutions, Governance, and Democracy; Migration; Economic and Monetary Policy; Competition Policy and Market Regulation; Culture, Knowledge and Innovation; and International and Transnational Relations.

Within each of these core themes, the Centre hosts major research programmes and projects, and a range of working groups and ad hoc initiatives directed by the research staff. The Centre's research staff includes joint chair holders, who are also professors in the teaching departments of the EUI (Law, Economics, History & Civilization, and Social and Political Sciences), part-time professors, research fellows and assistants, post-doctoral fellows, and visiting scholars.

The Centre is home to a large post-doctoral programme including Jean Monnet and Marie Curie fellowships as well as other publicly and privately funded fellowships. Fellowship holders conduct research on projects that relate to one or more of the Centre's main research themes.

The Centre is directed by Stefano Bartolini.

Highlights of Academic Activities

A large number of academic activities took place at the Centre during 2007. A few highlights from among the approximately 200 events (conferences, workshops, training courses, seminars etc.) organised by the Centre include:

The Florence School of Regulation e-learning course for staff members of energy regulators and sponsoring companies, with 42 participants from 16 countries, was conducted from January – September.

An intensive thematic session on Migrants' Remittances and Investments in Countries of Origin, run by the CARIM project from 24 – 26 January.

A conference on Un référendum européen pour la Constitution européenne. Problèmes juridiques et politiques, on 9 February.

The Eighth Annual Mediterranean Research Meeting, with over 200 participants in 16 workshops, from 21-25 March.

The annual conference of the Florence School of Regulation on Effective Implementation of Regulation, on 11 May.

The Third Annual Consortium Conference of the New Modes of Governance Integrated Project, attended by 60 participants from the Project's partner institutions, from 31 May-1 June.

The Rencontre Consultative du Projet MIREM sur la Migration de Retour au Maghreb, from 23 – 24 November.

In November the Centre launched RSCAS News, an electronic newsletter informing readers of important news, research initiatives, events, publications, and other developments at the RSCAS.

The publications of the members of the Centre are listed in another section of this report, but special mention should be made here of the Third Annual Activity Report of the New Modes of Governance Integrated Project and of Migrants de retour au Maghreb : Réintégration et enjeux de développement, Rapport général, of the MIREM project.

Staff

The Centre's full-time professors at the start of 2007 were Giancarlo Corsetti (ECO), who also holds the Pierre Werner Chair on European Monetary Union; Adrienne Héritier (SPS);

Stefano Bartolini, RSCAS Director, and Alexander Trechsel

Rick Van Der Ploeg (ECO); Heike Schweizer (LAW) Rikard Stankiewicz (SPS); Bo Stråth (HEC); Pascal Vennesson (SPS); Jacques Ziller (LAW) Bo Strath left the Centre in June and Kiran Patel (HEC) arrived in September 2007. Virginie Guiraudon held a Marie Curie Chair in the RSCAS and the SPS department until June 2007. Various other EUI professors, including Alexander Trechsel (SPS), Jaap Dronkers (SPS) and Anindya Banerjee (ECO), cooperated actively with or ran projects at the RSCAS.

In order to avoid repetition in this Report, we will omit a listing of the research areas of our full-time 'joint chair' professors, as these are included in their respective Departmental descriptions. We instead provide a general description of the Centre's own research programmes.

In addition to our full-time (joint) professors, the Centre has a number of part-time professors working on specific research programmes or projects. Part-time professors in 2007 were Ivo Daalder (until August), connected to the Transatlantic Programme), Philippe Fargues (scientific director of CARIM), Massimiliano Marcellino (for the EFN project, until June), Pippo Ranci (director of the Florence School of Regulation) and Alessandra Venturini (executive director of CARIM, from May). Jean-Pierre Cassarino co-ordinated the MIREM project.

Many research fellows and research assistants work on the Centre's research programmes and projects. Including all academic and administrative staff, fellows and visitors, approximately 110 persons worked at the Centre in 2007, occupying offices in the Convento di San Domenico, Villa Malafrasca and Villa La Fonte.

Research

Institutions, Governance, and Democracy

In the field of EU Institutional and Constitutional Reform the Centre's research focus continually adjusts to developments in the reform process. At the moment and in the coming years research will deal with EU institutional design reform, as well as the substantive content of reform; with intentional negotiated institutional change (through Treaty reorganisation and revision) and with the 'Interstitial Institutional Change' taking place between the highly salient formal treaty revisions. In the Governance field research focuses on new modes of governance in Europe (New Modes of Governance project), examining the transformation of governance in and beyond Europe by mapping, evaluating and analysing new modes of governance. In the field of Democracy and citizens' participation, a multitude of studies and research projects at the RSCAS have, in the past, taken up the challenges to and opportunities for democracy in Europe. Recently, with the creation of the European Union Democracy Observatory (EUDO), the RSCAS intends to consolidate scientific knowledge and policy relevant know-how on EU democracy. The Centre has obtained funding under the EC Seventh Framework Programme for a design study meant to set up an infrastructure for research on citizenship, political participation, and electoral democracy in the EU. This project (PIREDEU) started in early 2008.

Migration

The Migration core theme aims to generate novel insights with regard to migration processes and policies in sending, transit and receiving countries, in the European Union, the Mediterranean and beyond. The Centre brings together scholars from various disciplines who are engaged in advanced analytical and comparative research applied to international migration, asylum, transnational mobility, international relations, citizenship, human rights, and policy issues. Research in this core theme addresses various current policy issues through the dissemination of research and analytical reports, online databases with public access, the organisation of seminars, lectures, training sessions and a Summer school. CARIM: The Euro-Mediterranean Consortium for Applied Research on International Migration offers an instrument for observing, analysing and forecasting migratory movements—and their causes and consequences—that originate from, transit through, or are destined for the countries of the Barcelona Process. MigRes: Migration Resources provides online research tools to assist academics and students with a specific interest in migration-related issues in Europe, as well as teaching resources (i.e. syllabi). MIREM: Migration de Retour vers le Maghreb provides online access to analytical tools and data for a better understanding and analysis of returnees' patterns of reintegration in the Maghreb countries. The Migration Working Group offers an informal and congenial atmosphere for interdisciplinary debate, through the presentation of research in progress. MUSMINE is an innovative research observatory set up by the RSCAS in collaboration with the Ethnobarometer programme of the Consiglio italiano per le scienze sociali and aims to create a permanent research and training centre on questions raised by the presence of Muslim minorities in Europe. The Florence School on Euro-Mediterranean Migration and Development offers post-graduate studies and professional training in the field of migration studies.

Economic and Monetary Policy

The development of the European Union carries with it important implications for the design and outcomes of economic policy. This is the case with the adoption of a single currency and a monetary policy in the Euro-zone, but also with regard to policy issues concerning taxation, regulation, labour markets, the welfare state and the environment. Our goal is to study economic policy issues relevant for the global economy, with particular attention to the old and new European economies. The first pillar of this theme covers research on International financial systems. The main focus is on monetary integration in an enlarged EMU under the auspices of the Pierre Werner Chair Programme on European Monetary Union. We are also concerned with the transatlantic dimension and, more generally, issues of the international financial system. The second pillar concerns Economic stabilisation and the design of fiscal and monetary policy. An important question is the extent to which the European economies share a common business cycle; thus, the monitoring of developments in this field is a core activity. The third pillar deals with Public Policy issues in the national economies and the international economy. These include longer-term, public-finance issues of taxation policy, pension reform, and international environmental policy (e.g. markets for pollution permits). Particular attention is paid to the design of an efficient welfare state making use of the principles of mutual obligations and second-best economics.

Competition Policy and Market Regulation

The Centre has long been at the forefront of research with regard to important developments in competition policy and the (ambivalent) role of regulation in creating or restraining competition. This research concerns the fundamental issues of competition policy (anticompetitive agreements to rules regarding market power, merger control, competition rules addressed to the Member States, state aid rules and public procurement rules) and market regulation (structure, failure and successes of 'regulation for competition' in liberalized markets like energy and telecommunications, issue of 'private regulation' regulation in the area of corporate law and financial market rules). The Florence School of Regulation (FSR) focuses on the economic regulation of energy, in particular on electricity and gas markets, but it aims to become a reference point for regulatory theory and practice in various sectors. It develops academic research and promotes interaction with decision-makers in public institutions and in companies. The project on Fostering Regulation through Corporate Social Responsibility focuses on the role of corporate social responsibility in the nurturing of regulation in states with weak regulatory capacity. The Workshop on Energy Law and Policy is an annual event that attracts regulators, lawyers, European Commission officials and academics for an open discussion on the EU internal market in energy and the legal and regulatory issues arising from its progress. The Workshop on EU Competition Law and Policy is a long-standing programme exploring topical policy and enforcement issues in the field of EC competition law and is nowadays recognised as one of the main reference fora for debate on EC competition law and policy issues.

Culture, Knowledge, and Innovation

The evolution of the production of knowledge through education, research and innovation systems in contemporary societies is crucial. These systems are the primary, though by no means sole, drivers of innovation both in the economy and society at large. They are the key elements of the larger institutional clusters, generally referred to as 'innovation systems' or 'research and innovation systems'. They depend in turn on the character of education and renewal of education systems. The Centre's current research has therefore a double focus: the relationships between the structure of the knowledge base, the dynamics of research and the innovation processes; and the institutional framework within which these processes operate, and which largely conditions their success. The European Forum

Paolo Ponzano, European Commission Fellow

Thomas Grünert, European Parliament Fellow

2006/7 on Assessing the Quality of Education and Its Relationships with the Inequality in European and Other Modern Societies, under the direction of Professor Jaap Dronkers (SPS Department), established a significant framework for the study of quality differences in education and their relationship to inequality. The RSCAS is a partner in a Sixth Framework Programme Network of Excellence on Policies for Research and Innovation in the Move towards the European Research Area (PRIME).

International and Transnational Relations

The European Union is an international actor of growing significance. Its external policies and those of its member states have major impacts on its neighbours and beyond. In recent years, the Centre has focused on the enlargement of the EU, the Mediterranean region and transatlantic relations. The global trade regime, European foreign and security policies, and the EU as an international actor are issues among our interests. The Centre is currently turning its attention to the wider 'neighbourhood' policy. Focusing on key theoretical issues and policy questions, the research domain European Security and the European Union in World Politics deals with the issue of what constitutes European security, its dimensions and actors, and its transformations in a global context. It examines how, why, and to what extent states in Europe prepare and use their military power, the growing role of the EU in defence and security, and whether the EU has a grand strategy. The Transatlantic Programme conducts policy-oriented and basic research on the subjects of transatlantic relations and transatlantic governance. Its activities aim at improving public and scholarly understanding of transatlantic partnership, and the role of the transatlantic partners in issues of global governance. The Mediterranean Programme was inaugurated in 1999. It is funded mainly by private and public corporations, banks, and public authorities. The Programme focuses on the Euro-Mediterranean area, thus embracing Southern Europe, the Middle East and North Africa, including the countries involved in the Barcelona Process, the Arabian Peninsula, Iran and Iraq. Currently, the Mediterranean

Programme is concentrating on the study of relations between the European Union and the countries of the Middle East and North Africa, while it continues to enhance the creation of networks between the cultural and research institutes of the countries involved and to offer a comfortable environment to establish, or strengthen, informal contacts between policy-makers and experts on both sides of the Mediterranean. The Annual Mediterranean Research Meeting which has been organised since March 2000, is the main academic venue in Europe for discussing original research in the social sciences between scholars from Europe, the Middle East, and North Africa. The Security Working Group brings together EUI faculty, fellows and doctoral researchers who are working on security issues from different disciplinary and methodological perspectives.

Max Weber Programme

Profile

The Max Weber Programme, which started in September 2006 at the European University Institute, moved successfully into its second year in September 2007. The programme represents a new model of a structured postdoctoral programme in the social sciences. Villa la Fonte in San Domenico di Fiesole hosts the second cohort of forty fellows, coming from 23 different countries and from a wide variety of institutional backgrounds. The programme integrates research and academic practice activities. It aims to reflect on, and develop, international standards of excellence in Academic Practice, with a special focus on Academic Communication: writing, presenting and teaching. It also embraces other professional aspects, such as participation in the academic job market, grant application and management, and publishing, refereeing and mentoring.

The Max Weber Programme is funded by the European Commission (DG Education and Culture) and is the largest postdoctoral programme in the Social Sciences and Humanities in Europe. Through this initiative the European Commission plays a key role in taking into account new trends in academic training in Europe. Firstly, the large number of fellowships granted, 40 in total each year, represents a European trend to meet the conditions of a tight and competitive academic labour market by increasing the availability of postdoctoral fellowships. Secondly, by financing the Max Weber Programme, the Commission acknowledges the immediate postdoctoral phase not only as a very difficult one in the trajectory of an academic career, but also as a crucial one for reaching standards of excellence.

Activities

The Max Weber Programme on Academic Practice encompassed several activities, developed over the academic year. The Academic Practice Workshops were hands-on workshops delivered by professional scholars. The discipline-based Fellows Academic Practice Groups met regularly throughout the year, with the two-fold objective of improving different aspects of the academic practice of their members through peer review, and helping to define standards of excellence, possibly with the support of scholars and other professionals (e.g. within the Academic Practice Workshops).

The Academic Writing Workshops and Writing Groups offered practical advanced training in English academic writing. Writing activities profited greatly from the collaboration and invaluable input from the EUI Language Centre, namely Nicola Hargreaves, Nicola Owtram and visiting linguist Laurie Anderson. In addition the MWP has a team of professional language correctors and editors who give full support and tutorial feedback to fellows on all articles and papers.

In order to support the research and publication output of the Max Weber Fellows, a series of workshops took place throughout the year, dedicated to recent developments in the academic publishing market, best practices in publishing and refereeing, the use of citation indexes and so on.

The Max Weber Programme actively supported fellows seeking academic positions. A number of workshops were organised in which the fellows discussed and developed their CVs, cover letters, biographical sketches and web pages. Fellows also shared information and discussed job market strategies in their fields. In addition they received professional feedback on their presentation and interviewing skills. All fellows who were actively on the job market in the programme's first year have secured academic and research positions following their MWP fellowship.

The initial 'September Presentations' of the fellows' research agendas not only served the purpose of introducing each fellow's work to their colleagues, mentors and, more generally, to the EUI community, but also served as an exercise in public presentation. To this end, the seminars were videotaped and followed by feedback sessions in which presentation and public speaking performance were assessed by professional coaches, and the further training needs of the fellows were assessed.

The Max Weber Programme also aims at improving and developing standards of excellence in the teaching skills of the fellows, while taking into account that fellows arrive with different teaching experience and that teaching methods differ across fields, cultures and university systems. Three types of activities were designed to fulfil this aim. First, specific Academic Practice Workshops on 'best practices' in higher education teaching addressed issues arising from university teaching in different contexts (class size, etc.) and methodologies (lecturing, leading groups, e-learning, etc.). Second, fellows designed new courses and/or critically assessed existing curricula within the Academic Practice Groups. This process was followed by appropriate feedback from mentors and Max Weber Programme colleagues. Third, most fellows, on a voluntary basis, were also involved in active teaching during their fellowship. This was arranged through collaboration with their mentors, or other EUI professors; in postgraduate courses, seminars or Summer schools; or by offering courses within a network of universities collaborating with the Max Weber Programme, including a number of American universities who have campuses in the Florence area.

MWP Academic Careers Observatory

The Academic Careers Observatory has been developed as part of the Max Weber Programme's aim to assist young scholars in enhancing their academic career. The Observatory's website offers information on the structure and accessibility of different national academic university systems. The work for the Observatory began in January 2007 and in April 2007 the website was a reality. The Max Weber Fellows of 2007 have assisted the Observatory by providing information on their country of reference. The Observatory is now a valuable resource not just for Max Weber Fellows but for the wider international academic community at all career stages.

The Observatory operates on an interactive basis and is in constant development; everyone is strongly encouraged to access the website and send comments or correct and modify pages and information where needed. Visit the Observatory at: www.eui.eu/MaxWeberProgramme/AcademicCareers/standing across the disciplines present in the programme and at providing a forum for multidisciplinary debates, which can become a basis for better academic practice and, possibly, interdisciplinary research. Multidisciplinary criticism requires the understanding of the questions and methods of different disciplines. Fellows benefited greatly both individually and collectively by broadening their view of the social sciences and the humanities beyond their own special field. The MRW workshops of 2007 were given by (in chronological order):

MWP Conferences

Max Weber in the 21st Century. Transdisciplinarity within the Social Sciences (27-28 April 2007).

The first of the Max Weber Programme Conferences provided a forum for reflection, analysis, and debate about the current state of some major issues that have already been raised by pioneer social scientists. Keynote speakers included Joachim Radkau (Bielefeld), Sandro Segre (Genova), Fabrizio Zilibotti (Zürich), John Hobson (Sheffield), Hartmut Lehmann (Göttingen/Kiel), Shalini Randeria (Zürich), Catherine Colliot-Thélène (Rennes), Julia Adams (Yale).

Research and Higher Education in Europe: Opportunities and Challenges for Young Academics (24 May 2007).

This conference was the first in a series of Max Weber Programme Conferences that will provide a forum for reflection, analysis and debate on the current state of the “European Research and Higher Education Area”, taking into account, in particular, the perspective of young researchers starting an academic career in the Social Sciences and Humanities. The conference focused on two main issues: ‘Research Funding Opportunities in the Social Sciences and Humanities in Europe’ and ‘Some Comparative Analysis of European Higher Education Systems’. Keynote speakers included Michel André (Directorate-General for Research, European Commission), Roman Arjona (Directorate-General for Research, European Commission), Pierre Valette (Directorate-General for Research, European Commission), Andreu Mas-Colell (Barcelona Pompeu Fabra, European Research Council), Marijk van der Wende (Twente), Barbara Kehm (Kassel), David Dill (North Carolina), Pello Salaburu (Pais Vasco).

Constitutions and Markets (14-15 June 2007).

2007 marked the 50th anniversary of the Treaty of Rome. A half century of peaceful socio-economic development in which the European Union expanded from the original 6 signatories to its current 27 member countries. A half century marked by the interplay between the process of market integration and globalization and the process of constitutional and intergovernmental institutional reforms, not only of the unfinished European Constitution but also of constitutional and market deregulation, reforms in the former socialist countries, as well as in other European countries going through a process of regional decentralization. This rich experience of how legal and political institutions can enhance—and be sustained by—the process of economic growth has not been limited to the European Union. In particular, the rapid growth of China, India and other developing economies, together with the contrast of less positive experiences, has shed new light on how different constitutional arrangements can affect—and be affected by—the development, and the regulation, of markets. Keynote speakers included Guido Tabellini (Bocconi), Leszek Balcerowicz (Warsaw School of Economics), Peter Cserne (Columbia/Hamburg), Zhiyuan Cui (Cornell/Beijing), Davide Ticchi (Urbino), Andrea Vindigni (Princeton), Jennifer Gandhi (Emory University), Colin Crouch (Warwick), Daron Acemoglu (MIT), Tor-Inge Harbo (Oslo), Daniel Brou (Western Ontario University), Harold James (Princeton/EUI) and Giuliano Amato (Italian Ministry of Internal Affairs/EUI).

Academic Careers in the Social Sciences and the Humanities. National Comparisons and Opportunities (30 November 2007).

Currently the higher education system is undergoing deep changes in most European countries. This is not least due to the Bologna Process, which aims at the creation of a homogeneous higher education landscape in Europe. Navigating the different national academic systems and the myriads of available funding and grant systems is not an easy task. Yet more accessible knowledge on the various academic structures and career prospects is in high demand, not the least due to the increasing mobility of scholars. To meet this need, the conference explored the academic career options of young PhD holders, focusing mainly on the disciplines of Economics, History, Law, and Social and Political Science. Keynote speakers included: Frances Meegan (LSE Career Service), Jose-Gines Mora, (CEGES, Valencia University). Kamma Langberg, (University of Aarhus), Daniel Denecke (Council of Graduate Schools, Washington), Frédéric Sawicki (Lille Center for Politics and Administration), Daniele Checchi (University of Milan), Lisa M. Lynch (Tufts University), Alain Peyraube (Paris CNRS, Member of the ERC).

Library Services

The Library services comprise the Library, the EUI web and EUI Publications.

Library Infrastructure

Refurbishment of the main Library corridor

The corridor on the first floor of the Library, which houses reference collections and a selection of current periodicals, has been completely refurbished. Higher shelves have been installed thus providing more space for books. The number of public access PCs for catalogue consultation have been doubled.

On-site and off-site storage

New storage space has been found to accommodate the growing Library collections. This extra space means that the current collections can be developed, and brings together all off-site and dispersed collections into two large storage areas. One on-site storage area is in the Upper Cloister of the Badia, and the other, off-site storage area is at Villa la Fonte. The Limonaia at Villa la Fonte has been restored and equipped with state-of-the-art technology to preserve part of the Library's paper collection, some 150,000 volumes.

User services

Collection development

Strategic choices have been made in terms of paper and electronic collections development. The introduction of e-books in the Library collection has been studied and a pilot project has been launched on campus. Some journals have been acquired as e-only and are part of this pilot project.

Preservation of digital collections: A feasibility study was carried out on the preservation of digital collections. LOCKSS, CLOCKSS, PORTICO models have been studied to define a future strategy for the EUI Library.

Increasing visibility and dissemination of research output.

EUI Web

Usability testing was carried out by an external consultancy firm so as to know the strengths and weaknesses of the EUI website and Intranet. The website has been reorganised, and at the end of 2007 the EUI decided to acquire a Content Management System. Once implemented and launched, the CMS will increase user friendliness, improve visibility, and provide more control with all the benefits of an Enterprise CMS.

EUI Repository CADMUS, the EUI Open Access electronic repository

At the end of 2007, the repository contained 6300 records, including bibliographical records and full text papers.

In 2007 the first e-theses were published in full text. The average number of monthly hits, including by search engines, amounts to 150,000. The average number of .pdf downloads amount to 12,500 per month.

The web address of CADMUS is cadmus.eui.eu/dspace/index.jsp
Contact address: cadmus@eui.eu

In 2007 two staff members left the Library. One staff member was replaced. The Library currently has 21 staff members. Of this total, 2 staff members work on Web and Publications.

Some figures for 2007

Acquisitions: The Library collection grew by approximately 14,289 volumes

Inter-Library Loans: 7970 ILL requests were made

Loans: 72,106 books were borrowed (renewals included)

In-house consultation: 55,327 books and periodicals were consulted in the Library

Reshelving: 112,434 books and paper periodicals were reshelved

Visiting External Library users: 4106 visitors were admitted to the Library

Library website use: over 1 million hits on the EUI Library website were recorded in 2007.

Historical Archives of the European Union

Under the Deposit Agreement signed with the Community institutions in 1984, the EUI manages the Historical Archives of the European Union and makes them available to researchers. In 2007, 250 additional linear metres of archive material were transferred from the Commission, the Council, the Parliament, the Economic and Social Committee, the European Investment Bank and the European Court of Auditors of the European Union, and stored in the premises of Villa Il Poggiolo. The HAEU processed more than 7000 files and digitised and diffused on line 3700 files of institutional records.

In accordance with the Prodi-Mény Joint Declaration signed on 27 September 2004, the Historical Archives are also responsible for acquiring, conserving and making accessible the archives of persons or movements playing a major role in European integration. The Archives acquired important collections including those of former President of the Commission, Romano Prodi, the German federalist, Klaus Schödübe, the European League for Economic Cooperation, and the France-European Movement. It processed 800 files of private archives.

In 2007 the Archives were involved in the development of the project for Villa Salvati, which will become the new headquarters of the EU's Historical Archives in 2010. This new building will have three times as much storage capacity as the current villa and will be fitted with the latest document-security and access-control equipment.

The Historical Archives constitutes one of the most important centres for historical sources on European integration. In 2007 over 770 working sessions were registered in its reading room and 6300 dossiers were consulted, leading to the publication of some 50 dissertations or theses on European subjects.

In 2007 the Historical Archives were particularly involved in the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Treaties of Rome and the Centenary of the birth of Altiero Spinelli. They took part in the research projects: The European Commission, History and Memoirs of an Institution, and Fifty Years of the Treaty of Rome which led to a publication by the Commission for the 50th Anniversary of the European Community. They also participated in conferences and exhibitions dedicated to European 'founding fathers' and events.

Services

Academic Service

In addition to the Academic Service's main activities which focus on academic recruitment and the administration of the doctoral programme, highlights of which can be found in the President's introduction, in 2007 the Service dealt with the following:

The Service acted as the secretariat for the Strategic Review Group. At the request of the committee the Academic Service also provided data input for several meetings. The meetings culminated in a report presented to the High Council at its December 2007 session.

At the end of 2006 a comparative survey was started concerning the outcome of the career paths of EUI alumni, organized with the support of CIRGE, the Centre for Innovation and Research in Graduate Education at the University of Seattle. It is the first comparative study using the methodology set up by the National Science Foundation in America and it is hoped this will become a pilot project for this kind of study within Europe. Results are expected in spring of 2008.

Over the year, a set of activities were developed and set in motion regarding the transfer of generic and academic training skills for young researchers and young PhDs. Moreover, in cooperation with the Alumni Association, a series of career seminars was organized for EUI researchers with the assistance of EUI alumni who presented their experiences. This sort of activity is a crucial part of career development and will continue in 2008.

Owing to the ever-increasing competition with other doctoral programmes in the academic world the EUI needs to ensure that it continues to attract and increase the number of good quality doctoral candidates. To this end the Service is currently carrying out an in-depth analysis in order to guarantee the correct and targeted dissemination of publicity about the EUI.

Computing Service

During year 2007 the Computing Service introduced a new computational platform for mathematical models based on an array of PCs. This provided EUI users with a more user-friendly interface and seamless access from remote sites via a web interface.

In line with the efforts made last year to prepare for the enhancement of the EUI web site, a WEB CMS (WEB Content Management System) was acquired. The aim of this System is to enhance the publishing capabilities of the Institute while offering our users a more easily accessible interface to web contents publication.

To meet growing expectations on the part of academic personnel, researchers, and staff for modern equipment, half the inventory of EUI computers was replaced with new models. All terminal rooms were also upgraded with larger flat displays.

The Service increased the number of connection points for laptop PCs, and, in its effort to increase the flexibility and performance of the communication structure, it further developed the wireless platform and created new fibre optic links between premises.

Given the observed increase of users connecting from personal laptops, the IT control protocols and procedures to guarantee flexible yet secure access were strengthened. Further steps in the area of functional continuity were taken by setting up a secondary location to be used, in future years, as a back-up technical room.

Budget and Financial Service

The main tasks of the Budget and Financial Service are as follows:

- Preparing macro management (transfers, etc.) of the EUI's annual budget and the medium-term financial forecasts;
- Calculating and paying salaries and pensions for all categories of staff;
- Handling contacts with external sponsors, and financial management of related funds;

- Supervising and coordinating administrative site officers (ASOs) in the Departments;
- Preparing meetings of the Budget and Finance Committee;
- Preparing decisions for delegation and sub-delegation of signature;
- Coordinating and preparing, in cooperation with the services concerned, meetings of the Advisory Committee on Procurements and Contracts (ACPC).

During 2007, the activities of the Service fell into the following main categories:

Pay

- Consolidation of cooperation with the management of the NAP software, attending the periodical meetings of users.
- Improvement of the audit system in terms of both the database and the use of the relevant budget appropriations.
- Development of a new budget presentation structure on the basis of instructions received by the Budget Committee and High Council

Research Administration

- In 2007, more external funding was raised than in previous years. Procedures for requesting, negotiating and managing funding were subsequently developed to meet this new challenge. In particular, the new EC Framework Programme was launched and many applications were received.
- The management of the Max Weber programme, annual budget € 2,175,000, was absorbed by the Financial Service. In the absence of other management resources, major functional streamlining was carried out to promote further economies of scale.

Administrative Site Officers (ASOs)

- Reinforcement of the link between the central administration and the decentralized/departmental administrative units (ASOs).

Logistic Service

Logistic Service is responsible for the day-to-day management of 35,000 square meters of property with roughly 1,000 users. The Service is in charge of repairs, technical maintenance and cleaning, furniture and office supplies, conference and seminar logistics, official meetings, the Welcome Unit including housing and researcher flats, restaurants, travel agency, printshop and Crèche.

In addition to the daily running of the EUI, in 2007, in collaboration with the Building and Restoration Service, Logistic Service opened a new premise, Villa Raimondi to house the Computing Service and its 24 staff members. Consequently most of the staff in the Departments of Law and History were moved and 18 working spaces for researchers were created. The Service continued its policy of progressively refurbishing all offices to meet changing ergonomic standards.

In September 2007 the Welcome Unit came into being. The idea is to concentrate all tasks connected with the arrival and sojourn of all new members of the EUI, whether academic or administrative staff, visiting professors or fellows. The Housing Office has been included in this new unit.

In a drive to save resources and increase quality, efficiency and service levels, the Logistic Service has been working on a quality control system to be implemented in 2008. This will allow systematic monitoring of contract compliance for outsourced services and financial penalties in case of defect.

In 2007 Logistic Service organised a number of important official visits, including several Heads of States, Ministers, and Members of Parliament.

Building Restoration and Development Service

The Building Restoration and Development Service achieved a number of principal objectives during 2007 regarding the restoration and functional alterations of EUI sites.

In the Badia Fiesolana, the Service has completed the restoration work on the 'Chapter house', including furnishings; it has completed the supply and furnishing of a new computing terminal room; it has installed a new security system for the building; and it has supplied and fitted 150 pigeon holes in the room adjacent to the main entrance.

In Villa Schifanoia, all parking areas have been made fully serviceable and a new, safer access to the car park from Via Boccaccio has been opened. In addition, work for automating the entrances has been carried out.

At Villa la Fonte, a newly constructed car park has been opened. The Service also has leased additional space in the Villa, to be used by the Library as an off-site storage space.

The plan to construct researcher housing proceeds, with the procedures to obtain building permission for the researchers' residences completed in December 2007.

At the Villa Salviati site, the Service has overseen the completion of the building plans for the new headquarters of the Historical Archives of the European Union and the beginning of restoration of a part of the building.

The Service has rented an additional building for the EUI—Villa Raimondi. Work has been done to the inside of the building, and the structure has been allocated to the Computing Service.

Accounting Service

The main tasks of the Accounting Service are to ensure the accurate, punctual execution of payments submitted by the different services, the collection of revenues, the management of the treasury and the registration and keeping of all documents related to revenue and expenditure.

The Service registers all transactions using the double-entry method on the basis of the calendar year. The accounts are closed at the end of the financial year when a balance sheet and the revenue and expenditure accounts are drawn up. During 2007 the Service carried out all basic tasks within their stipulated timeframes and met all objectives for the year, in particular the one concerning the execution of payments within three working days of their receipt.

Additionally, there was increased activity during the year regarding the management of the Pension Reserve Fund. The Service also held a supplementary meeting of the renewed Supervisory Board.

Internal Audit Service

During 2007, the work of the Internal Audit focused on the ex-post checks of accountancy documents and the suggestions made will be followed up in the coming months.

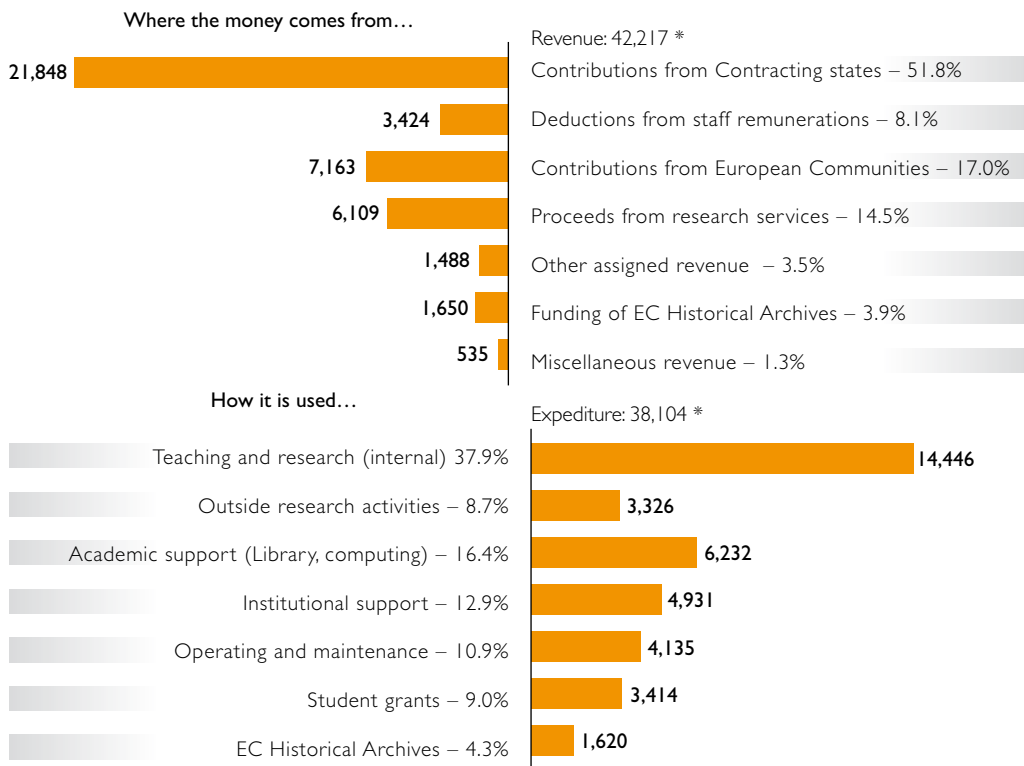

The audit for the Political and Social Science Department, the last of the four reports regarding the Institute's Departments, was also concluded during the first semester 2007.

Another important issue was the preparation of the Audit Certificate for the external projects financed by the European Commission under the Sixth Framework Programme. In the last year the Internal Auditor produced 17 certificates for a total value of € 1,739,041.

Moreover an analysis of the expenses for lunches and dinners for conferences, seminars, theses and official meetings was carried out; assistance was provided to the external auditors during their presence at the EUI and throughout the year.
